We are SOVINTERN

SOVINTERN is an international socialist network, a political international of a new type. It is designed to unite all healthy contemporary left forces on a horizontal basis. We have no executive committee and no centralized leadership of any kind — we rely on the living creativity of people and their leaders who are fighting imperialism in different corners of the world, and we build relationships on the basis of mutual trust.

SOVINTERN emerged because, after 35 years of the unchallenged dominance of capitalism, its systemic crisis has become obvious even to the rabid defenders of the rule of private property. New and old conflicts — in Ukraine, in Palestine, in Iran and Sudan, the US blockade of Cuba, Washington's aggression against Venezuela and the DPRK — demonstrate the selectivity of the North American "rules-based order," its inability to stop and resolve existing wars and prevent new ones. Economic crises sweeping the planet every 10–12 years — 1997, 2008, 2019 — leave working people with nothing, while making rich parasites even richer and more voracious. Young people see no future in capitalism: that is precisely why they are taking to the streets across Europe and the Americas, demanding affordable housing, public education, and an end to the war that Western elites are preparing in order to save their position.

Understanding these trends, the socialist political party A JUST RUSSIA (SPRAVEDLIVAYA ROSSIYA) came forward with the initiative to create an international association of a new type. Eight fraternal organizations immediately joined its call: the Sandinista National Liberation Front, the Party of Socialists of the Republic of Moldova, the Movement of Socialists (Serbia), the Party of Progress and Socialism (Morocco), the Workers' Party of Britain, the Tunisia Forward Movement, the American Communist Party (ACP), and the Union of Democratic Socialists (DRC). Having begun its path in February 2026, the initiative brought together more than 100 parties, movements and organizations of socialist, communist, and anti-imperialist orientation from over 70 countries of the world at the Founding Forum in Moscow on April 27, 2026, becoming the largest event of its kind on the territory of modern Russia — the historical cradle and center of world socialism.

In just the first few months after the Founding Forum, the ranks of SOVINTERN comrades were joined by more than 40 organizations from countries of the global majority; among the network's like-minded supporters became the leader of the united left forces of Peru and presidential candidate Roberto Sánchez, Nobel Peace Prize laureate Adolfo Pérez Esquivel, former President of Paraguay Fernando Lugo, former President of Honduras Manuel Zelaya, one of Hugo Chávez's key allies who served as Vice President of Venezuela, Elías Jaua, and many others.

The lively interest in SOVINTERN is largely due to the principles on which our position and structure rest.

Horizontality — we have no center; we are a network relying on the enthusiasm of comrades and mutual trust.

Openness — SOVINTERN is open to all forces that set themselves the goal of victory over Western imperialism and are not implicated in actions directed against socialism, communism, and the working class.

The heritage of Soviet civilization — the system of values inherited from previous generations of the most progressive forces of the 20th century forms the foundation of our vision of humanity's future. It is composed of such values as peace, friendship, internationalism, solidarity, cooperation, and joint peaceful development.

Following the results of the Founding Forum in Moscow, a structure of interaction among SOVINTERN network comrades was developed, the key element of which is regional hubs. The activity of a regional hub on all matters is determined by a regional coordinator — a person elected by comrades on the basis of initiative, authority, experience, and vision for the further development of SOVINTERN in the region. The structure of some hubs provides for the position of national coordinators — unlike regional coordinators, they determine SOVINTERN's activity in a specific country.

"Comrades of SOVINTERN" are organizations and individuals who have expressed their intention to join the network in any available way: by contacting a regional or national coordinator, through the network's public addresses, by personal recommendation, etc., and who share our principles and values.

Right now, the Moscow network hub of SOVINTERN is creating a fundamentally new secure format for interaction among like-minded people — a social network that capitalist transnational corporations and their puppet governments will not be able to block. This tool is designed to become a collective organizer and coordinator of the activities of like-minded people around the world, an alternative means of communication and self-expression for millions of young people tired of corporate and state censorship. Closed beta testing will begin in the 2nd–3rd quarter of 2027.

Our fate in reality depends only on ourselves. Will we live in a world of harmony of unprecedented technologies, the lives of billions of people and nature, directing creative and productive potential toward the exploration of the Universe, the victory over cancer, aging and death, the creation of a truly happy society — or will we continue to destroy our own kind to enrich a handful of "masters of life" who will decide to get rid of us as soon as the labor of machines becomes sufficiently productive? It is precisely to these two options that the life choice of every conscious person comes down.

SOVINTERN is convinced that the foundations of the first scenario were laid in the 20th century precisely by Soviet civilization — the first human flight into space, the first nuclear power plant, the first publicly available antibiotic, the mass victory over infectious diseases, the elimination of illiteracy and the creation of a universal system of public education, universally accessible quality medicine in the interests of society — these are the first steps that in an exceptionally short period lifted the global majority out of the chains of colonial darkness and slavery into the leaders of the planet. All this was given to the world by Soviet civilization, and it is precisely these starting points that set the vectors of the positive program of the contemporary progressive movement. The productive forces of society are already developed enough to satisfy the basic needs of all people on Earth, to enter a new political stage of human development, and its achievement lies only through the victory over imperialism and capitalism.

Join the network! Stay with SOVINTERN!
